

Once again, a warning about Fake Fabergé, 'Fauxbergé' so called by Fabergé expert Géza von Habsburg. Although all Imperial Easter Eggs are accounted for, even the missing Eggs, from time to time I get inquiries about "a never before seen Fabergé Imperial Egg".

Forget it folks, unless you have found one of the missing Eggs, there are no Imperial Eggs to be found and if one IS found it will come up at an auction and realize many, many millions in Euros, Dollars or Pounds!

Images

Here below are some "Fabergé eggs" I found online earlier this month (November 2013) after I got another inquiry about "a truly remarkable Fabergé Egg, hidden in a vault for many, many years". Alas, it was a make-believe, again!

According to Sylvie Samani, some of the above eggs bear the marks of Mikhael Perkhin (1860-1903) and Julius Rappoport (1864-1916), well-known work masters of Faberge. Read what Peter Schaffer says about marks lower on this page!

Supposed Fabergé Marks on egg nr. 1 above.

Images above of eggs and marks, courtesy Sylvie Samani: http://sylviesamani.com/index_155.htm where you can find more images, including stamps and marks! Check out also the other pages of her article about "make-believe". There is a lot of info about styles, materials, "Imperial symbols" and much, much more!